

Zoe Empowers: Kenya Program Data

Since January 2018, Zoe has been collecting data directly from Empowerment Group members to measure the effectiveness of our program through a survey that has been conducted in randomly selected empowerment groups. Each family in the selected groups is surveyed at three points in the program: at intake (incoming), at the midpoint (1 ½ years), and at graduation. We are examining the influence of the program at the individual, household, and community levels.

The charts in this document show the data from the surveys conducted on groups at those three levels in Kenya in 2019. The table below lists the details of those surveys:

EG start date	level	# surveys	sur rev level	survey date

Self Sufficiency Index

The self-sufficiency index (SSI) was developed to be used with the program data survey. The survey questions cover all of Zoe’s eight “areas of influence”: food security, housing, health/hygiene, child rights, education, income generation, community connections, and spiritual strength. Survey responses are scored using the following scale:

0 = extremely vulnerable 1 = vulnerable 2 = stable 3 = strong

The SSI is calculated for each survey participant; the scores can be broken down to show areas of strength and weakness. The chart below shows the SSI scores for all the surveys collected in Kenya in 2019.
